Melvin Schuler's career, spanning more than fifty years, included a remarkable list of achievements. While working as an art professor at Humboldt State University he developed a form of sculpture characterized by tall, irregular, and solemnly monumental columns in elegantly carved and finished black walnut suggesting archaic runes and totems...Some of his tall sculptures begin with drawings inspired by nature or the human form, often combining powerful vertical columns that are modified by cubed, angled, or curvilinear shapes in opposition to each other. "I use a play of opposites, gentle and forceful, male and female, to express harmony or discord," wrote Schuler.
